

*Joke of the Week*TM

When King Arthur was about to embark on a long crusade, he called on Merlin to devise a chastity belt for Gwenivere. The belt was to contain a miniature guillotine.

Upon his return, King Arthur called to his Knights of the Round Table and had them all strip from the waist down. One by one, he went to each knight and shook his head, telling all those whose members were missing to get out of his sight.

That is until he came up to Lancelot. Seeing that Lancelot was intact, King Arthur exclaimed, "Lancelot, I knew I could count on you to be trusted. Name anything at all and it is yours."

Lancelot replied "UNGH! UH! UNGH!"